“As we focus on the intersection of corporate giving, employee engagement and charitable impact, the rising tide of expectations is here. Corporations, employee donors and the public expect charities to demonstrate greater accountability, transparency, and evidence that their work is making a significant, measurable impact.”

President and CEO, America’s Charities
About Us

Mission
America’s Charities helps the nation’s most trusted charities thrive by generating sustainable income through workplace giving and additional paths. We inspire employers and individuals to reach their philanthropic goals and support the charities of their choice.

Vision
America’s Charities is a major force in transforming and growing philanthropy.

Overview
America’s Charities is a multi-dimensional, mission-driven organization that connects public and private sector employers with charities to engage employees in greater giving.

Since 1980, America’s Charities has been at the forefront of workplace giving’s transformation – from paper pledges to digital platforms, from giving to engagement, from traditional fall campaigns to year-round opportunities inside and outside the walls of the workplace.

Our experience combined with an accountable and transparent process has resulted in the distribution of more than $650 Million to over 10,000 charities.

Our national headquarters is located in Chantilly, Virginia, in the Washington, D.C. area. Regional offices are located in New Jersey, Texas, and California to serve our customers.

The organization is proud to be a recipient of the Better Business Bureau’s Wise Giving Alliance Charity seal of approval and is a part of the GuideStar Exchange program.
Dear Supporters and Friends,

Education, STEM, human rights, hunger, poverty, health, research, disaster relief, women, children, veterans, and animals – these are the issues and constituents America's Charities' programs and services affect every single day. And thanks to your support of America's Charities and our family of federations, Children First – America’s Charities, Health First – America’s Charities, and Community First – America’s Charities, we have raised more than $650 million for over 10,000 nonprofit organizations addressing those issues nationwide since our founding.

In our 35-year history, America’s Charities has been at the forefront of:

- Empowering employers and their employees to support the community and causes they care about through workplace giving programs;
- Expanding nonprofit capacity and impact through charitable funds management, advocacy, marketing and other services; and
- Spearheading research which has inspired more meaningful public discourse on corporate social responsibility, nonprofit performance, and ways the two sectors can unlock social impact by working together more collaboratively.

However, today’s giving environment is changing.

While the workplace remains a major center of giving and volunteering in the private sector, the Federal Government’s employee workplace giving program, the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC), has been under stress. Fewer Federal employees are giving and participating as a result of federal shutdowns, benefit reductions and a general uneasiness resulting from ongoing Congressional turmoil. The drop in CFC giving has affected thousands of charities including America’s Charities members and America’s Charities itself. As a result we operated with a budget deficit in 2014 and anticipate doing so again in 2015.

Fortunately we anticipated this downturn so we could weather this downturn while expanding our non-CFC efforts. We anticipate that our new strategic efforts in the private sector will result in a more positive financial picture in 2016 and beyond as we focus on helping charities, employers and employees increase their social impact through more giving and volunteering.

The Workplace: Still a Center of “Giving”

There is no doubt that workplace “giving” has changed dramatically over the past decade. Our most recent research, Snapshot 2014: Rising Tide of Expectations - Corporate Giving, Employee Engagement and Impact, looked at the needs and issues facing both employers and nonprofits related to workplace giving and employee engagement resulting in these key insights:

- There is a growing expectation held by employers and employees that charitable organizations demonstrate greater accountability, transparency, and impact with measurable results and more robust communication.
Technology and digital culture are transforming how nonprofits interact with and engage with companies and their employees. It is accelerating how employers, employees and charities relate to each other with the democratization of information increasing expectations across the board.

Workplace giving now embraces broader aspects of employee engagement with an emphasis on meaningful engagement that meets the strategic needs of employers and employees.

Nonprofits are struggling to develop and maintain corporate relationships during this time of change.

80% of companies surveyed said employee workplace payroll giving would remain a cornerstone of their philanthropic efforts, but how they execute those programs is changing with an increased use of technology and higher expectations of their charitable partners around impact, accountability and communication.

As a result of these new expectations, America’s Charities has evolved. While workplace fundraising remains a core service we provide for our member charities, government and corporate partners, we now see a large value proposition in effectively connecting companies, causes, employee donors and volunteers for maximum social impact. This change has evolved over several years and allows America’s Charities to build on our heritage and apply our core competencies and experience in new value-added ways for charities, employers and employees.

America’s Charities remains committed to growing sustainable, re-occurring funds for nonprofits, and helping employers garner greater social impact through their workplace giving, employee engagement and social responsibility programs. The future is bright, but requires we keep our finger on the pulse the market to ensure we remain relevant and constantly add value for our member charities and employer partners.

We want to thank our member charities for their confidence in America’s Charities. We thank the employers who work with us as strategic partners in creating effective, contemporary workplace giving and employee engagement programs. And we thank the donors – the millions of people who support America’s Charities members and other charities through employee workplace giving each year.

With appreciation,

Steve Delfin

Member Charity Fees
America’s Charities member organizations are not charged for “cost sharing” of federation expenses. However, members pay fees that are determined by their pledge levels in both Combined Federal Campaign and Private Sector Campaigns for a given year.

The fee is a sliding scale, which was designed to lower the fee percentage due as the charity’s pledge totals increase. It is as follows:

- 17.5% of pledges up to $700,000 (with a minimum fee of $9,000)
- 13% of pledges from $700,001 to $1.5 million
- 10% of pledges over $1.5 million

Fees are paid in one of two ways: 1) Collected from the charity’s monthly distribution over a 10-month period; or 2) Paid directly by the charity on a monthly basis.

The amount raised in 2014 in gross pledges are as follows: CFC = $2,580,087  Private Sector = $444,295

2014 Accomplishments

Serving Our Stakeholders

America’s Charities’ work throughout the year is focused on our primary stakeholders – member charities, private sector employers and donors. In 2014, America’s Charities applied to more than 250 public sector campaigns for our member charities.

This included 150 local campaigns and the overseas campaign for Federal Government’s Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) and more than 100 state and local government campaigns. In addition, member charities were included in more than 100 private sector campaigns.

We also released our Snapshot 2014 report with a panel discussion at the National Press Club. Building on America’s Charities’ 2013 panel discussion on digital culture and the transformation of employee engagement from the perspective of corporate gatekeepers, the 2014 panel discussion examined the connection between corporate giving, employee engagement and investing in charitable performance and impact from the perspective of charities.

For donors, we provide a highly accountable and transparent process to ensure their donations get to their designated charities in a timely and efficient process. We are also becoming a major source of data and information designed to support more informed giving.

Snapshot 2014: Rising Tide of Expectations

On April 24, 2014, America’s Charities released its fourth original research report in 14 years. Snapshot 2014: Rising Tide of Expectations - Corporate Giving, Employee Engagement and Impact. Nearly 240 nonprofit organizations participated in this research project, which examines key trends shaping corporate-nonprofit partnerships and explores new expectations charities are facing around accountability, transparency and impact.

Key Findings:

1. Charities address higher expectations of donors. In the face of rising expectations, charities are responding to corporate, institutional and individual donors to better demonstrate greater accountability, transparency and results.

2. Digital culture allows nonprofits to engage with key stakeholders. Technology and the digital culture are transforming the way nonprofit organizations interact and engage with companies and employees.

3. Engagement is the new standard. Workplace giving is moving to a broader engagement model, and charities are providing greater opportunities for employees to learn about, interact and engage with them.

4. Partnerships are key. Charities recognize the value of partnering with companies but are challenged to sustain those partnerships.
Annual Workplace Giving and Employee Engagement Symposium

We held our Annual Workplace Giving and Employee Engagement Symposium on April 24, 2014. Designed for corporate leaders and young professionals interested in cross-collaboration, corporate philanthropy, social responsibility, employee engagement, and nonprofit impact, this annual event provides solutions and insights on key trends and strategies shaping the future of employee engagement and workplace giving.

Building on America’s Charities’ 2013 symposium on digital culture and the transformation of employee engagement from the perspective of corporate gatekeepers, our 2014 event examined the connection between corporate giving, employee engagement and investing in charitable performance and impact from the perspective of charities.

The event was moderated by Debra Snider, Vice President of Operations at GuideStar, who lead a truly interesting discussion between the audience and our panelists: Stephen Greenhalgh, Perla Ni, Emily Simone, and Tom Watson.

Workplace Giving Campaigns and Member Event Participation

For the 2014 fall campaign season, America’s Charities, Children First, Health First, Community First and member charities were presented to thousands of employees in over 100 private sector workplace giving campaigns, including nearly 40 workplace giving campaigns managed by America’s Charities. Members were also listed in the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC), the world’s largest annual workplace giving campaign. Approximately 4 million federal employees (civilian, military, and postal workers) are solicited annually through the CFC, which consists of nearly 150 individual campaigns throughout the country and overseas that take place between September 1 and December each year.

Additionally, we supported our member charities’ participation in over 700 CFC, state/local, and private sector campaign events. For our members, participating in events helps raise their profile and give them an opportunity to meet with prospective employee-donors and inspire them to give. Public sector events included those held at Federal agencies such as Department of Commerce, Department of Education, Pentagon, CIA, Homeland Security, Treasury Department, Department of Health and Human Services, NAVSEA, Library of Congress and more.

To amplify our members’ voice and visibility, specifically in the Washington, D.C. market where the largest CFC – CFC of the National Capital Area – is conducted, America’s Charities launched its Fall #ItMatters advertising campaign, using a mix of traditional print advertising, digital media, and leveraging our social media platforms (Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn).

Media exposure from the #ItMatters campaign, along with the facilitation of our members’ participation in workplace giving programs, resulted in public and private sector employees generating over $30 million to America’s Charities, Children First, Health First, Community First, and member charities in 2014.
