2020 marked America’s Charities’ 40th anniversary, and we began the year preparing to celebrate our journey as an organization. From our humble beginnings in 1980 as the “National Service Agencies,” focused on helping charities gain access to the Combined Federal Campaign, to America’s Charities as we are known today – a foremost expert on workplace giving, corporate social responsibility (CSR), and social impact – we knew we had much to celebrate. Yet, nothing could have prepared us for the turn of events in 2020. The COVID-19 pandemic became both our driving force and daily inspiration as we dialed in on how best to help people, businesses, and communities during this global crisis. Our incredible team showed us time and again that they could remain agile and pivot as needed to properly support our members, clients, and each other.

In times of crisis, it’s the human element of relationships that mean the most. Thankfully we were able to lean into our organization’s existing business continuity plan, which helped us keep health and safety a top priority, while seamlessly transitioning staff to remote working and ensuring our people had the technology, support, and resources necessary to be successful. That focus extended to our members and clients as well. From developing workarounds when needed, to taking the initiative to enact new ideas, to quickly and drastically scaling the client base of one of our newest service offerings – Employee Assistance Funds (EAFs) – by nearly 700 percent in a span of two months, we ensured our help was offered to every one of our stakeholders. We have never been more proud of our staff’s flexibility, creativity, tenacity, and compassion.

Our ultimate goal is to bring more resources to the nonprofits changing our world. While we had to adjust the methods and manners in which we interacted with our employer clients, nonprofit members, and each other in 2020, we did not waiver from our mission. In fact, we doubled down on it. We increased the charitable donations of our clients’ workplace giving campaigns by about nine percent, all the while broadening and deepening our client base and our portfolio of services. From helping $16 million dollars get into the hands of those who need it most through our EAF program, to launching our latest comprehensive technology plus support solution, Engage, so companies can scale up their CSR programs easily, to providing even more and deeper thought leadership and hands-on support to our clients than ever before, we were ultimately able to help 300 businesses across a range of industries inspire their combined employee base of 13.5 million to support causes, which is helping 10,000 nonprofits – including our own 100 high-impact nonprofits – get vital resources.

The Dalai Lama once said, “If tragedy strikes, don’t lose hope. Transform it into an opportunity to make things better.” 2020 certainly put that to the test. But we saw a community of caring individuals and leaders come together to deliver meaningful social impact, on a scale that we may not see in our next 40 years. We were proud that our 40th year focused on meaningful work. What better way to celebrate how far we’ve come, then to show how much we can achieve when we work together. We sincerely value the dedication and support we received from our stakeholders, our Board of Directors, the donor community, and in particular, the incredible nonprofits that make the world a better place every day.

Responding to Crises and Meeting the Moment’s Greatest Needs

In addition to the devastating toll the coronavirus pandemic had in 2020, it was also another record-breaking year of natural disasters, including wildfires along America’s West Coast, numerous hurricanes that affected communities along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts, flooding and tornadoes in the Midwest, and the bushfires in Australia. On top of that was perhaps the most divisive presidential election in modern U.S. history and a national reckoning on issues of race, social justice, and policing. As a reputable convener and provider of resources, many of our clients, community partners, and individual donors turned to America’s Charities for ways to address these crises and issues through workplace giving, Employee Assistance Funds, and matching gift campaigns.

COVID-19 Resource Center

America’s Charities was quick to set up our Coronavirus Resource Center (www.charities.org/covid19) where we housed information to spotlight critical nonprofit needs, tools to help employers and their employees help each other and the causes they care about, and resources from our partners.

America’s Charities Coronavirus Response Fund

Benefiting Feeding America and PATH, America’s Charities designed this fund to make it easy for individual donors and employers to support coronavirus response efforts through employee giving. With one donation to this fund, donors can simultaneously ensure individuals affected by the pandemic have access to food, while also helping governments around the world immediately respond to the pandemic and strengthen health systems for billions.

Donations can be made to this fund through our website here.

The Critical Ways America’s Charities' Nonprofit Members are Helping Communities Respond to the COVID-19 (Coronavirus) Pandemic

Nonprofits are the backbone of our communities – some more visible than others in their impact and the needs they meet. While COVID-19 affected everyone, nonprofits particularly felt the pinch as they simultaneously adjusted their work environments and policies to ensure the safety and well-being of their staff and volunteers, while demand for their programs and services surged beyond the scale their networks were prepared to handle. The cancelation of fundraising galas and partner development conferences further exacerbated the situation and strained their finances, capacity, and resources.

Within a week of the WHO declaring COVID-19 a global pandemic on March 11, 2020, America’s Charities reached out to its community of 100+ nonprofit members and published an article to bring light to the critical role nonprofits fill in this country; help individual donors identify and support nonprofits supporting coronavirus efforts; and encourage cross-sector collaboration to ensure nonprofits have the necessary resources, capacity, and support to continue providing help throughout the pandemic.

Pointing Corporate Social Responsibility Inward

The vast majority of Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) programs are outward-facing with strategies, initiatives, and donations that impact lives, improve communities, and make the planet better. But CSR can be more than just an external strategy; businesses can leverage that same ethos to positively impact their own employees through Employee Assistance Funds (EAF), also known as Employee Relief Funds or Employee Crisis Funds, which help employees cope with unexpected hardships that place undue financial stress on them and their families.

In 2019, America’s Charities piloted a new EAF service with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce Foundation with the goal of expanding the program in 2020 to be inclusive of more businesses. COVID-19 became the impetus for many organizations who had long wanted to set-up an EAF program to take action, as employees across the country struggled with unexpected financial hardships caused by the pandemic. By year-end, America’s Charities had grown their EAF program to more than 100 EAF clients, processing more than 16,000 grants, and managing more than $16 million in grants.

Educating Employers About EAFs:
America’s Charities’ President and CEO Jim Starr spoke at several virtual conferences, webinars, and fireside chats about EAFs, including how companies can support the emotional and financial needs of their employees through EAFs, different ways to set up and manage EAFs, and the tax advantages, privacy, and flexibility companies can receive by working with a 501(c)(3) tax-exempt public charity like America’s Charities.

Webinar: The Next Step - Evaluating and Sharing Your Impact

While there is no one right way to collect and report data, there are proven practices that can help you evaluate and share your impact. Hosted in August 2020 by SmartSimple, America’s Charities’ President and CEO Jim Starr and Dan Eardley, President of SmartSimple’s U.S. Operations, answered the most common questions we hear from corporate leaders, such as how to:

- Track, report, and communicate your collective impact - from employee giving and volunteering programs to grants and other corporate philanthropy initiatives - to stakeholders
- Move from measuring activity and outputs (e.g. participation, dollars/time given) to outcomes
- Utilize the right measurement, visualization, reporting, and/or sharing tools
- Measure intangible data, such as outcomes (e.g., behavior change, engaged employees, benefit to community)
- Track metrics across multiple companies/business units/countries

Member Fundraising & Advocacy

2020 Member Advertising Campaign

Exclusively available to members of America’s Charities, our annual Member Advertising Campaign is an awareness campaign designed to help our members amplify their brand visibility and reach a mix of potential workplace donors (military, Federal government, state/local public sector, and private sector employees) located across the United States during the peak giving season (October - December).

Print ads and editorials about our member charities were featured in The Washington Post on November 8, the day after Biden was declared President-elect, making it one of the most widely circulated issues of the year. Additionally, members’ ads were promoted through a mix of digital, social media, and streaming audio/video media ads reaching a targeted audience via various devices, websites, and channels including Spotify, iHeartRadio, Hulu, Netflix, Amazon Prime, fuboTV, HGTV, ESPN+, CNN.com, Weather.com, GovExec.com, USAToday.com, and WashingtonPost.com. The 2020 advertising campaign delivered about 12 million impressions to participating members’ ads, with an average overall click-through rate of 1.43% and an average overall video/audio ad completion rate of 97.42%.
